A Letter from Dr. Jen & Jamie

On the south end of the Kitsap Humane Society campus, in a beat-up, yellowish, double-wide mobile home that smells faintly of dog is where the administrative team lives. They're the people behind the scenes. Those who raise the funds to do important work for the animals in our community. Those who purchase the kitty litter and vaccines, keep the lights on, and ensure the water's running. It's where the bills get paid and the work is done to ensure the rest of the team can focus on caring for all the animals.

But it's also home to a lot of celebrations. Cheers go up when a longtime resident is finally adopted. When a truckful of donated pet food rolls up. When a new grant is secured or a new sponsor joins the team. When a game-changing donation comes through the doors. That's when we ring the bell that adorns the hallway wall: "The Bell of Abundance." It's a silly ritual, but it's one that makes everyone happy and it's our way of showing our gratitude for our good fortune. Also, we're a little superstitious.

Gratitude is a big thing here at Kitsap Humane Society – because we have a lot to be grateful for. From the volunteers who so generously give of their time and heart, to our partners who support our efforts, sponsor our events, and lift up our public presence, to the grantors whose validation of our successes assures us that we're headed in the right direction – so many contribute so much.

And we need that help. Operating an animal welfare organization of any size is a big job. Operating one that does as much as Kitsap Humane Society does is an ENORMOUS one. Currently, it costs about $120,000 per week to run the show, and the fees we collect from adoptions, licensing, and veterinary services don't come close to paying all our bills.

The thousands of animals we walk and train and heal don't walk, train, and heal themselves. The pet food we distribute to families in need doesn't just magically appear. And kibble and Milk Bones doesn't exactly grow on trees. We pinch every penny and scrutinize every purchase and still run at a deficit – monetarily and personnel-wise. The only way we can do what we do is with a giant helping hand from our supporters.

Which is why you're now reading "The Gratitude Issue" of our magazine. This is our opportunity to thank everyone who's a part of our extended team and to be sure that our community recognizes the great work they're doing on behalf of the animals in our care. It's our way of ringing the Bell of Abundance for the whole world to hear.

Thank you to all of them – and to all of you that may join us in the work we do for the animals we love.

Gratefully,

MARGARET

For more than 15 years, Margaret Poshusta has been a fixture at Kitsap Humane Society, volunteering as a Cattery Lead, washing dishes, and doing laundry. She also wrote our cat behavior protocols, mentors new volunteers, and sorts through donations. That's where she discovered an untapped resource: selling donated items to benefit the shelter. People often donate supplies that KHS can't use and – before Margaret came along – those things might go to waste. And if there's one thing Margaret can't stand, it's waste.

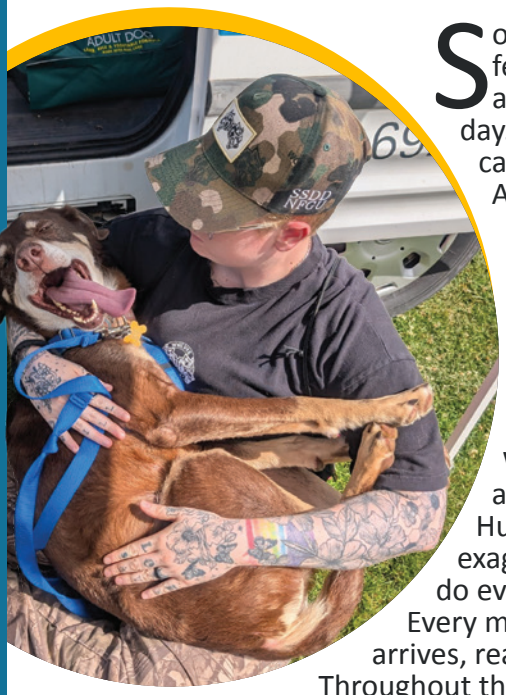

In 2013, the retired technical writer began collecting such items and holding garage sales to raise money, and in 2023, switched to selling online. Combined, she's raised more than $32,000 over the years – money that's gone toward purchasing pet food, beds, and other necessities for the KHS animals. Thank you, Margaret… every little bit helps in big ways!

THE GIFT OF TIME

Some of them come in just a few hours a week, while others are on campus nearly every day. They walk dogs and play with cats. Do laundry and dishes. Adoption counseling, surgery recovery, and kennel cleaning. Customer service, clerical work, and event preparation. Lawn mowing, weed pulling, and trail maintenance. The list goes on and on and on. Volunteers do it all.

When we say volunteers are the backbone of Kitsap Humane Society, it's not an exaggeration. We simply couldn't do everything we do without them. Every morning at 7 a.m. the first wave arrives, ready to walk dogs – rain or shine. Throughout the rest of the day, our troupe of volunteers will touch every facet of the organization, working shoulder-to-shoulder with our staff to ensure that the daily needs of the shelter and the animals we care for are met. Among them are Mike – a retired high school teacher and football coach who spends his free time helping KHS solve its IT issues; Regina – an acclaimed opera singer who moonlights as a dog-walker; and Fred – another retired teacher who is the shelter's go-to dog whisperer, befriending the most scared and shut-down of our residents.

"These are amazing people," says Volunteer Manager Jessica Ginnochio. "The gift of time that they give to KHS is immeasurable. So far this year, volunteers have given us over 45,000 hours of their time. We honestly couldn't do it without them."

FOSTERS

OPEN HEARTS AND OPEN HOMES

As of this writing, Kitsap Humane Society has more than 300 animals in its care, which is not unusual. Yet there's only kennel space for about 65 dogs and 150 cats. Where are all the rest hiding? Well… everywhere.

Throughout the peninsula, hundreds of foster families have opened their hearts and their homes in assistance to KHS. They take care of the tiniest and most vulnerable, the sick and weak, the kennel-stressed, and the hard-to-handle. They nurse them to health, mother them when their actual mother can't or won't, and let them know they're loved until they find their forever home. And maybe the toughest thing they do: give them back when the time is right.

Sometimes, however, they fail. The foster family's intention may have been to give a dog or cat (or rat, guinea pig, or snake) a temporary home but love often gets in the way. As we all know, it's easy to become attached to an animal friend and – honestly – how can you deny that sweet face? That's what happened with Duncan (the smaller pup in the photo above) when he spent a week with his new clan. After a few sleepless nights, he began to settle in and bonded with not only his people, but also his new best buddy (and KHS alum), Sokka. Now he's part of the family. We call it a "foster-fail" and it's the only failure that's truly a "win-win".

SELMA

Kitsap Humane Society's "Humane Heroes" is a roster of supporters who have consistently donated to KHS for more than 10 years. The list is 182 names long and we're grateful to each, but there's a special woman who makes us smile every time we see her: Selma Kull. For 37 years, Selma has been supporting KHS and for 31 years, she's been attending our Animal Krackers gala – most recently last month. Now 96 years old, Selma's love for animals goes back to when her husband Donald was sent to Vietnam and she would hand-feed their dog fried liver and meatballs over the year he was gone. Their first donation was a car back in 1989 and although Donald has since passed, Selma has continued to be in our corner. These days, Selma keeps busy with annual multi-month cruises around the world and a routine that includes exercise, champagne, and a lot of friends. We're so happy to be one of them.

DONORS

ASTONISHING GENEROSITY

A remarkable thing happened on October 3. Nearly 400 people came together in a ballroom at Clearwater Resort to celebrate Kitsap Humane Society and the work we do. It was the 33rd annual Animal Krackers gala – our largest fundraiser of the year and a wildly fun time. But it's also serious business. The money raised through ticket sales, live and silent auctions, and sponsorships is a big chunk of our event revenue, but it's the "Fund-A-Need" raise-the-paddle portion of the show that makes up the vast majority of the proceeds. And on that Saturday night, the Fund-A-Need was a huge, huge success. Several supporters "primed the pump" with pre-event donations to get things going. Nine people raised their paddle at the $10,000 level and a sea of hands went up for $5,000, $2,500, and $1,500 pledges. Then the Jacobi Family Foundation announced that they'd be making a surprise $25,000 gift. That alone would've made for an extraordinary night, but the biggest exclamation mark was yet to come.

On the way out the door, our friends from Svanee's Foundation let our co-Executive Director Jamie Nocula know that they'd be matching every $10K pledge in the room. Astonishing generosity.

Kitsap Humane Society survives on this kind of generosity, in many forms. Our supporters donate money, but also stock, vehicles, and real estate. They name KHS as beneficiaries in their wills and get tax breaks for thinking of us when they make required minimum distributions from their IRAs. And as important as these funds are to us, the more valuable thing is what they represent: confidence in our mission and acknowledgement that we're making a real difference in our community.

GRANTORS

WORKING TOGETHER

Applying for grants is a laborious process, but for Kitsap Humane Society, it's become a little easier in recent years. That's because the growth of the organization and the breadth of its programs have made KHS eligible for a lot more of them.

"The addition of the Veterinary Lifesaving Center and the range of programs we offer has put us in a unique position to do big things," says KHS Grants Manager Paula Rimmer. "Funders like working with those who have vision and strong leadership – and those who get results."

It's those attributes that have contributed to KHS being recognized locally and nationally as a leader in animal welfare, and the grants that have been awarded to us affirm that our programs are evolving in a way that best benefits the community. Among the projects that have benefited from generous grantors: the recent dog holding remodel, thanks in part to a gift from the ASPCA; the Pet Food Pantry which gives out free pet food to families in need and is backed by a grant from the Gary Milgard Family; and the feline holding area that was completely remodeled with help from the Ben B. Cheney Foundation.

"The competition for these grants is fierce," says Rimmer, "but because of the way we've transformed our programs and the relationships we've built with these great organizations, we're able to compete for them with confidence."

ANNIE

The Ben B. Cheney Foundation does more than support local charities like KHS; they inspire the next generation of philanthropists as well. Nine-year-old Annie was tasked with making a presentation to the Foundation about the nonprofit of her choice, telling the Board why she thought the organization was worthy of a $100 gift. She chose Kitsap Humane Society. With her mother, Mallory, and two brothers in tow, Annie toured the KHS campus with co-Executive Director Jamie Nocula, learning about everything we do. Along the way, she got to hold a chicken in our barn, meet a whole lot of animals, and do a mock-surgery on a plush unicorn with Vet Tech Kenzie showing her the ropes. And her presentation to the Cheney Board was so successful that they decided to match the award. "It gives me hope that one by one, little acts like this can inspire a better world," said Ben B. Cheney Foundation Executive Director Erika Tucci.

SPONSORS

GOOD BIZ, BIG FUN

It's always a good thing to have great friends, and we're lucky enough to have the best. One of the ways our community supports our mission is through the myriad events we hold each year – from comedy shows to auctions to golf tournaments. And no matter the event, we can always depend on the legion of local businesses to put their name next to ours.

Throughout the year, there are multiple opportunities for businesses to align with us in the promotion of our projects, including: My Furry Valentine, Comedy Unleashed, PetsWalk, Putting Fore Pets, Wine & Whiskers, Santa Paws, Animal Krackers, our Holiday Gift Auction, and – of course – Puppuccino Pals. And the price to be a sponsor is surprisingly affordable, with different sponsorships going for as little as $250 and as much as – well, the sky's the limit. It's not just good business either. It's also big fun, as sponsors help share our events on social media, promote them at their location, and ultimately are there at event time, ready to hit a few balls, make a few toasts, and have more than a few laughs.

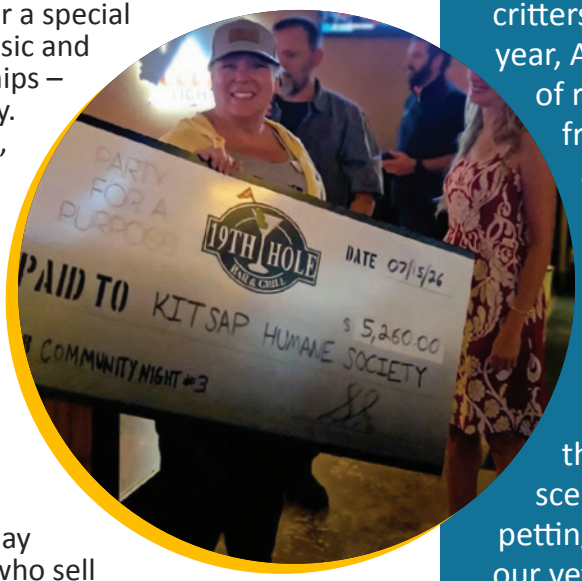

It's also a chance to get to know KHS just a little bit better, shine a brighter spotlight on your organization, and make a genuine impact on your community. For more information about how you can be a part of the KHS family, scan the code below.

THIRD-PARTY FUNDRAISERS

A VOTE OF CONFIDENCE

The 19th Hole Bar & Grill in Bremerton knows how to put the "fun" in "fundraising." Each summer, they swing open their doors for a special night of drawings and draughts, music and mozzarella sticks, fun and fish 'n' chips – all to benefit Kitsap Humane Society. And every time, the place is packed, the house is rockin', and lots of cash is collected for the animals in our care.

And they're not the only ones. From Gig Harbor to Bainbridge Island, individuals and businesses are raising money to support our mission. From the $102,494.00 check presented to us by Haselwood Auto Group and their annual "Drive for a Cause" event, to the array of businesses that display KHS donation houses, to little kids who sell lemonade on the sidewalk, every penny means the world to us. But it's more than that. Every time a pre-teen shows up with an envelope of money collected from their garage sale or budding lawnmowing business, every time a mom-and-pop shop holds an event in our honor, and every time a band plays a gig for the animals, it reminds us of how proud we are of the difference we make. And while we're endlessly grateful for the donation, we're equally grateful for peoples' confidence in our work.

ALICE

Not every Third-Party Fundraiser is a monetary donation. In Alice's case it was a whole bunch of much-needed supplies and toys for the KHS crew of critters. For her birthday this year, Alice asked that – instead of receiving presents – her friends purchase gifts for the animals. So one Monday in June, Alice and her mother Natalie dropped by the shelter with a trunk-full of treats. In gratitude for her generosity, co-Executive Director Jamie Nocula gave them a special behind-the-scenes tour: holding cats, petting dogs, and even watching our veterinarians in action. Thank you, Alice, for helping us help animals and happy birthday!

VERN

Do you celebrate Verniversary? There's a neighborhood in West Seattle that does so every May in recognition of Vern – the guy who's brought so much joy to the lives of the Smith family.

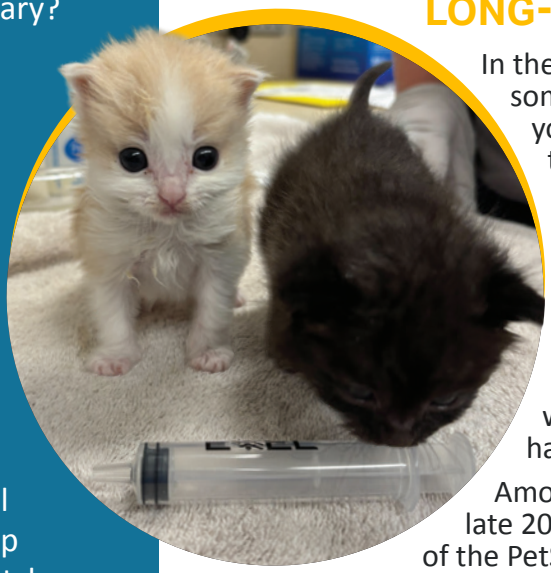

It was on May 14, 2016 when the Smiths adopted the shepherd puppy and ever since then, the family has been holding an annual garage sale to benefit Kitsap Humane Society for his "gotcha-day." Neighbors from around the area bring their castaway dishes, clothes, toys, etc. – in addition to monetary donations – and all the proceeds go toward supporting the animals who are following in Vern's pawprints in hopes of finding a new home. They've even added a "Get a mimosa for a donation of any amount" marketing pitch, which was - not surprisingly - super successful!

Thank you Jess, Joe, and Vern for thinking of KHS!

OUT-OF-AREA SUPPORT

LONG-DISTANCE LOVE

In the crowded world of non-profits, it's sometimes tough to get the recognition you deserve. Donors and grantors tend to pay attention to those who are in their immediate back yard, no matter how deserving that organization across Puget Sound might be. But in the last few years, Kitsap Humane Society has started to make headway – the organizations and people across the water and throughout the country have begun to celebrate all we do.

Among the biggest accolades came in late 2023, when we were named a grantee of the PetSmart Charities Accelerator Access to Veterinary Care Program. Through this grant portfolio, KHS not only receives funding, but also consulting, mentoring, and support tools to help us build our model animal welfare organization even better. Hot on the heels of that recognition came that from Petco Love in the form of a $45,000 check (and an anonymous matching donation) to facilitate access to affordable veterinary care. And the laurels just keep on coming: North Dakota's MDU Resources presented KHS with a $10,000 award in honor of their 100th anniversary; international nonprofit Greater Good Charities invited us to be an ambassador and hub for distributing pet food to those in need; and most recently, the Department of Veterans Affairs presented the Washington Veterans Home in Port Orchard with the Abraham Lincoln Pillars of Excellence Award for our joint dog foster program.

We love the kudos and all the support – from near and far!

BOARD OF DIRECTORS

LEADING THE CHARGE

When you hear the phrase "Board of Directors" you might think of a high-powered conference room and a long table surrounded by serious people with stern faces. They make important decisions in the morning, golf in the afternoon, and sip expensive wine in the evening. That would not be the Kitsap Humane Society Board. Our Board is one of kindness – still making important decisions, but more likely to be eating homemade cookies with a side of bocce ball later on.

Made up of 15 caring and involved community members from varied backgrounds, the KHS Board is an integral part of our team that helps guide our direction and ensure our success. Each of them brings their own talents to play, offering their experience and advice to senior managers, helping to bring new friends to the fold, procuring auction items for events, and generally overseeing the work we do.

This year, their input will be especially valuable, as we begin to rethink our mission, vision, and strategic priorities. Over the course of several months – and with input from staff, volunteers, and the community – we will work to assess our present and plan our future with our Board leading the charge. We'll talk about who we are, who we want to be, and where we want to go – all in service to our community specifically and animal welfare in general. Thanks to our Board, our todays are so much better than our yesterdays, and our tomorrows will be even greater.

LORI

Besides their work on our Finance, Governance, and Advocacy committees, our Board of Directors has another important role: boosting staff morale. They help plan thank-you celebrations, purchase reward gift cards and cater lunches, and – on one memorable occasion – showed up in festive costumes to distribute treats to the campus team (looking at you, Russ and Dana). Fortunately for us, among all these wonderful people is a fabulous baker and even more fabulous person – Lori Oberlander. In addition to her work procuring auction items, for every event – staff town hall meetings, appreciation events, galas and ground-breakings (or for really no reason at all), Lori shows up with box upon box of baked goodies and something for everyone, always with allergies and aversions in mind. We're so grateful for her; she really is a treat.

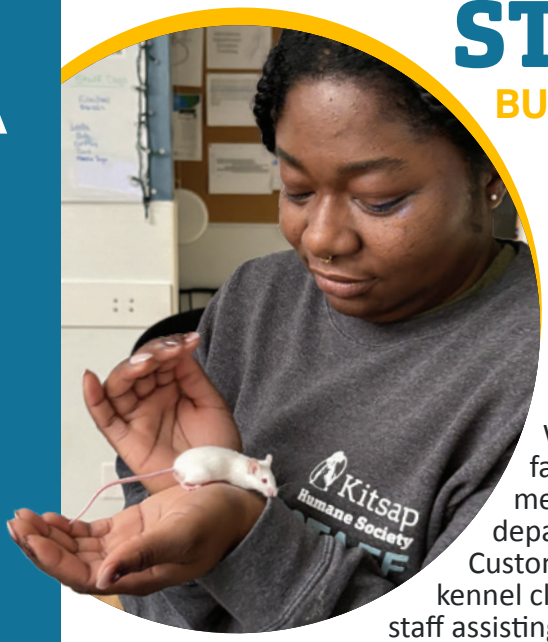

CASSANDRA

KHS stole her. We stole her from Mud Bay and we're not giving her back.

Cassandra Hunt is a former volunteer, and Mud Bay employee, and now a valuable part of our Customer Service team. "She's such a dear," says Customer Service Assistant Manager Kellie Liesmann. "Always willing to go the extra mile to help anyone."

Officially joining KHS in March of 2026, Cass immediately became a go-to person among the staff – knowledgeable, enthusiastic, and professional – and quickly made herself at home. As did her new friend, Lyra. The three-year-old shepherd mix was a good girl, but an exhausting one. Two adopters ended up returning the pup, as she was just "too hyperactive." But Cass didn't think so. While fostering Lyra (and literally taking her work home), she taught her tricks like sit and stay. And stay she did. Cass adopted Lyra and the two are now living happily ever after.

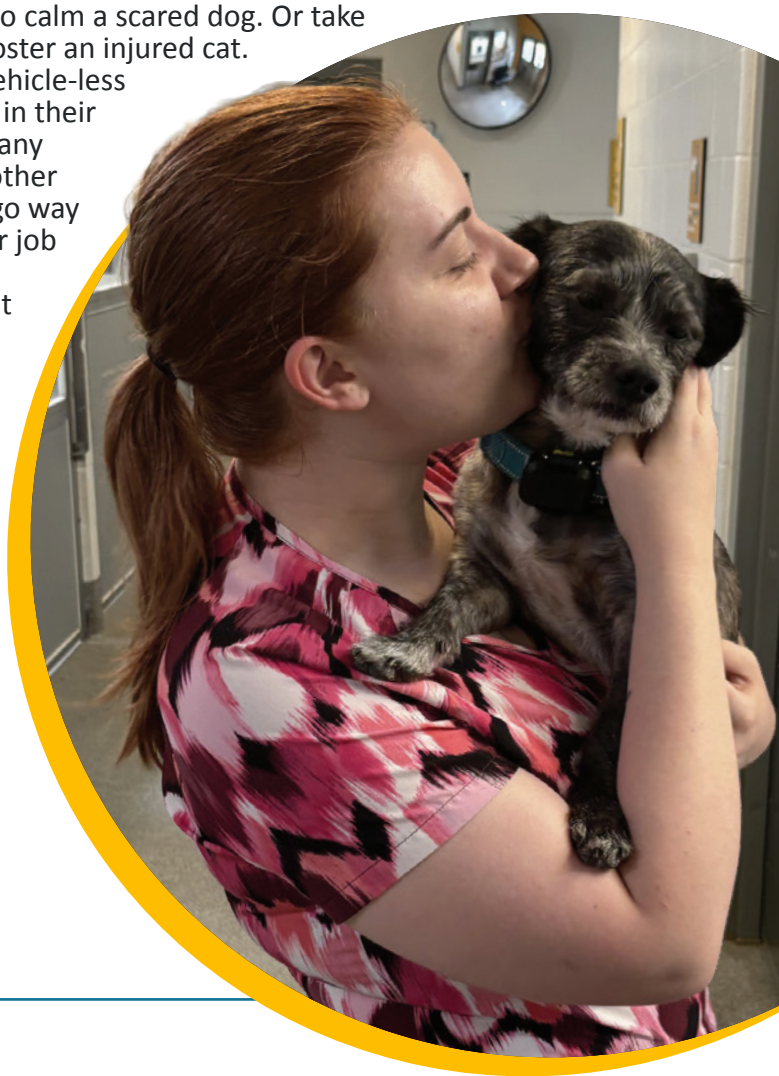

STAFF

BUILT DIFFERENT

When the readers of the Daily News proclaimed KHS to be the Best Place to Work in Kitsap County, we were flattered but not surprised. We're fortunate to have a tremendous team. A team that's built different.

We see it every day, but it never fails to make us proud. Team members jumping in to help a department that is overwhelmed. Customer Service staff joining in for kennel cleaning or dog walking. Behavior staff assisting Animal Care with hauling bags of dog food from one end of the campus to the other. Accountants filling in and taking kittens' temperatures when Veterinary Services is light on assistants. Every department is helping every other one. And why? Because to these special people, the only thing that matters is that the animals are well cared for. You'll never hear "that's not my job." Nobody's pointing fingers when things go sideways.

Why? Because they're in it for the animals and proud of the work they do. It's not uncommon to see staff members squatting in a kennel to calm a scared dog. Or take home and foster an injured cat. Or drive a vehicle-less client home in their own car. Or any number of other things that go way beyond their job description. They're what makes KHS great.

COMMUNITY

WE'VE MADE SOMETHING SPECIAL

We at Kitsap Humane Society are constantly in awe of our community. Each of the pages in this magazine is dedicated to a different facet of the generosity we see every day and simply could not exist without. Volunteers. Fosters. Donors. Grantors. Sponsors. Third-Party Fundraisers. Out-of-Area Supporters. Our Board. And Staff. Each working hand-in-hand to create something special.

Over the years, Kitsap Humane Society has evolved from a one-building pet-adoption destination to a sprawling campus of wrap-around services that not only serves animals but serves their families as well.

Thank you to everyone who's been a part of this transformation and those who will contribute to our efforts in the future. We're grateful for the gift of your time, talent, and treasure and we're enormously proud of what we've accomplished together.

HAPPY TAILS
PRAIRIE

Before Prairie's adoption, her new person was having trouble medically and needed the love only an animal can give. In comes Prairie, a stray who knew exactly what her person needed. Prairie provided love and support to her adopter, and her adopter gave Prairie, who came in as a timid stray, the love she needed as well. It was a match made in heaven.

Now Prairie spends her days giving cuddles, taking naps in the sun in the most contorted of positions, playing fetch with balls and her favorite frisbee, and roaming her new home's property with her new best dog friend Winnie, a Golden Retriever/Great Pyrenees mix. She's a happy, well-rounded gal, ready for hikes and paddleboarding, as well as curling up with her person. Yay, Prairie!

HAPPY TAILS
MARSHA MALLOW FKA "SASHIMI"

Marsha Mallow's story took a heartwarming turn when she found her forever home in August 2024. After arriving at KHS while giving birth to a litter of eight kittens, Marsha spent several months in foster care raising her babies until each found a loving home of their own. But her story wasn't quite finished! Her foster family realized they couldn't bear the thought of Marsha not knowing the same safety and love she had helped give her kittens, so they made her a permanent member of the family. Now, Marsha spends her days chasing sunshine, hunting fabric toys, showing off her impressive acrobatics, and demanding belly rubs with her signature Superman stretch. She's settled right in with her furry housemates and brings plenty of quirky charm to her home. Marsha's "Happy Tail" is proof that sometimes the best adoptions are the ones you never planned.
